School safety a priority in Saskatchewan

After last week's mass shooting in a Conn. elementary school, the province's school administrators stress preparedness

Days after 26 people were shot and killed at Sandy Hook Elementary School in Newtown, Conn., school administrators in Saskatchewan say Friday's tragedy was a strong reminder about the importance of school safety.

Janet Foord, president of the Saskatchewan School Boards Association (SSBA), says student safety is a top priority.

"After Friday's and some of the other major shootings, we don't take anything without a serious thought," said Foord.

"We look at safety quite seriously because nobody is immune to violence.... It's a tragedy that we don't ever want to see happen in our schools," an emotional Foord added.

She explained there are a number of guidelines the SSBA have in place for divisions to follow, but said it's up to school divisions to implement them.

The province's Minister of Education Russ Marchuk said he's confident Saskatchewan schools are safe.

"All 28 school divisions have emergency preparedness policies in place, they have critical incidents policies (and) they have supports available through the school division offices to deal with both staff, community and children's questions regarding critical instances," said Marchuk, noting each division works with local emergency responders to ensure individual needs are met.

"There isn't a school division in our province that doesn't take this matter very seriously," he said.

Dave Jackson, director of risk management and insurance with the SSBA, said he feels Saskatchewan schools are safe as they've been working on a risk and threat assessment initiative in divisions across the province with experts from the Canadian Center for Threat Assessment and Trauma Response (CCTATR).

"We're taking a proactive approach and trying to identify those individuals in the communities who have the intent to do what this young fellow did — and stop it," said Jackson.

The SSBA will also be distributing a document from the CCTATR to their divisions that provides educators with tools and methods to help provide a "supportive response" to those who were impacted by the incident.

67% approval ratingBrad Wall named most popular premier — again

Brad Wall continues to be the most popular premier across the nation, according to a public opinion poll by Angus Reid.

Two thirds of Saskatchewan respondents said they are content with Wall's performance in legislature, while 27 per cent said they disapprove and six per cent were not sure.

Angus Reid says Wall's high rating has remained the same for the past six months.

Wall is the clear winner with the highest 67 per cent approval rating in the poll and is followed by prairie premiers Alison Redford and Greg Selinger at 47 and 46 per cent respectively.

Saskatchewan interim NDP leader John Nilson had one of the lowest approval ratings of all the opposition leaders with 35 per cent approval.

The online survey spoke with 6,619 Canadians in nine provinces about their heads of provincial governments. The margin of error is plus or minus 1.2 per cent.

Snowmobiling 10,000 km of Saskatchewan's tranquil trails

Snowmobile Association. 66 clubs grooming the trails across the province

Snow falls across Saskatchewan and, with a roar, snowmobiles spring to life, ready to charge down more than 10,000 kilometres of groomed trails.

And the best part? All of the trails are connected, said Saskatchewan Snowmobile Association president Chris Brewer.

"So it doesn't matter where you hop on a trail. One of the great things we have here is the opportunity to tour, endless touring," said Brewer, who has been riding sleds since he was a child.

Brewer said back in the early 1970s, the province noticed that snowmobiling was on the rise and started grooming trails in three provincial parks. Snowmobilers were pretty happy, but they also wanted more trails outside of the parks.

Several local snowmobile clubs eventually got together and, with the snowmobile association, pitched a plan to the province for funding. The Snowmobilers hit the trails in Nipawin, Sask. money was used to buy some trail equipment and signs.

"Well, things really started to grow then," said Brewer.

"It wasn't until shortly after a lot of the communities and other clubs across the province saw huge benefit to their communities economically."

Today, snowmobile registration fees collected by Saskatchewan Government Insurance go to the association to fund its work maintaining trails and promoting safe snowmobiling.

The association has 66 clubs grooming trails across the province.

There are about 55,000 snowmobiles in Saskatchewan — the highest per capita of any province, said Brewer.

Brewer said the snowmobile system in Saskatchewan is the envy of many and a big draw.

"We see lots of visitors and we get lots of comments on our Facebook page and we get lots of emails from Manitobans that come here and say to us, 'Your trails are fantastic. Your trail signage is the best we've ever been on,'" he said.

RCMP seize $17K in counterfeit merchandise

Some of the counterfeit goods the Regina Border Integrity Section has seized within the last few years. CONTRIBUTED/RCMP

RCMP are reminding holiday shoppers to avoid fake merchandise after seizing more than $17,000 worth of counterfeit products from three Regina businesses.

Within the last two weeks, RCMP's Regina Border Integrity Section (RBIS) confiscated 561 counterfeit cell phone accessories and 273 electrical products from different businesses. All electrical products and batteries in Canada must meet specific standards and are regulated by a third party certification.

RBIS Const. Fabian Folk says the businesses were first-time offenders and delivered counterfeit notification letters and electrical inspection notification letters as warnings.

"The individuals that we dealt with, they were unknowingly selling the counterfeit goods and electrical goods. The individuals that are clearly selling it in contravention of either act, those are the instances where we will definitely be pursuing charges," said Folk.

If the businesses are caught selling counterfeit items again, RCMP say they will be charged and can be fined up to $1 million under the copyright act and $10,000 a day under the electrical inspection act.

Last year, the Saskatchewan RCMP seized more than $67.5 million worth of counterfeit merchandise from 876 investigations.

Spot the counterfeit

With holiday shopping season in full swing, here are RCMP guidelines to avoid buying counterfeit items:

- Price. If it's too good to be true, it probably is.
- Packaging. Check for poor quality graphics, spelling mistakes and different brands in the same packaging.
- Products. Check for missing labels or misspelled names or brands.
- Placement. Manufacturers are usually picky about product displays.

Gun control. Debate simmers as Democrats call for ban on assault rifles

A U.S. senator and lifelong member of the National Rifle Association became the most prominent gun rights advocate to speak out after last week's school shooting, saying Monday it was time for the debate to move beyond political rhetoric and begin an honest discussion about reasonable restrictions on guns.

As many gun-rights advocates and politicians remained silent, the killing of 20 children as young as six years old led conservative Democratic Sen. Joe Manchin to speak out Monday.

"Never before have we seen our babies slaughtered. It's never happened in America that I can recall, seeing this carnage," Manchin told MSNBC. "Anybody that's a proud gun owner, a proud member of the NRA, they're also proud parents, they're proud grandparents. They understand this has changed where we go from here."

The self-described "proud outdoorsman and hunter" added, "I don't know anyone in the sporting or hunting arena that goes out with an assault rifle. I don't know anybody who needs 30 rounds in a clip to go hunting."

Tracking ID chips

Judge to decide if students can be booted for tracking-badge refusal

A federal judge is mulling whether a Texas high school that requires students to wear tracking badges can remove students who refuse to comply.

U.S. District Judge Orlando Garcia on Monday didn't immediately decide whether San Antonio's Northside school district has the right to transfer 15-year-old Andrea Hernandez to another campus. The sophomore is refusing to join 4,200 other students wearing mandatory student IDs implanted with tracking chips.

Administrators say the chips make students safer and will help boost attendance records that are used to calculate badly needed state funding.

Hernandez is suing to stop the district from forcing her to change schools. Her family says the badge is a "mark of the beast" that goes against their religion.

A ruling could come later this week. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Connecticut shooting.

Gunman's motive still unknown, but investigators believe he attended Sandy Hook

The Connecticut town shattered by last week's school massacre held its first two funerals Monday, as officials weren't sure whether the school itself would ever reopen. Nervous students and teachers across the U.S. returned to classrooms under tighter security.

Family, friends and townspeople streamed out of two funeral homes after saying goodbye to Jack Pinto, who loved the New York Giants football team, and Noah Pozner, who liked to figure out how things worked mechanically. Friends and loved ones headed for two cemeteries afterward.

In front of the funeral home where relatives were mourning Noah, well-wishers placed two teddy bears, a bouquet of white flowers and a single red rose at the base of a maple tree. Hymns rang out from inside the funeral home where Jack's service was being held. "The message was: You're secure now. The worst is over," one mourner, Gwendolyn Glover, said.

The boys were being buried a day after the small community of Newtown came together for a vigil where President Barack Obama said he will use "whatever power" he has to prevent similar massacres.

"What choice do we have?" he said. "Are we really prepared to say that we're powerless in the face of such carnage, that the politics are too hard?"

Investigators have offered no motive for the shooting, and the Connecticut community is struggling to comprehend what drove 20-year-old Adam Lanza to shoot to death his mother at home in bed Friday morning, drive her car to the school and unleash gunfire on six adults and 20 children.

Obama has given no specifics on what he might do, and White House spokesman Jay Carney on Monday warned that "no single piece of legislation or action will fully address the problem."

Ottawa requests clemency for U.S. inmate

The Canadian government has sent a letter to Montana's governor requesting that he spare the life of death row inmate Ronald Smith.

The Dec. 10 letter from Foreign Affairs Minister John Baird to Montana's outgoing Gov. Brian Schweitzer is almost identical to one sent to the Montana Board of Pardons and Parole a year ago prior to the Alberta man's clemency hearing. It makes it clear that the Federal Court ordered the federal government to support Smith's case for clemency.

"The government of Canada requests that you grant clemency to Mr. Smith on humanitarian grounds," writes Baird. "The government of Canada does not sympathize with violent crime and this letter should not be construed as reflecting a judgment on Mr. Smith's conduct."

Smith has been on death row since admitting he murdered Thomas Running Rabbit and Harvey Madman Jr. near East Glacier, Mont., in 1982. THE CANADIAN PRESS

After eight months, mom has her missing kids back for Christmas

Reunited. Horror began in April when her children were not returned from a trip to her native Zimbabwe

A Toronto mom reunited with her two kids after eight months broke down Monday as she thanked those who helped bring the family back together in time for the holidays.

Biatra Muzabazi said she thought she would never get her boy and girl back from Zimbabwe, where they had gone on vacation in April but not returned.

Police allege family members hid the pair at a Zimbabwean boarding school.

"I never thought (I'd see) my children again," Muzabazi said, clutching her kids and choking back tears.

"You made it possible for me to be with my children for Christmas."

Det.-Const. Shari Nevills, the lead investigator, said it was a steep learning curve dealing with Zimbabwean laws.

"I had several moments when I really didn't think these kids were coming home," Nev-ills said.

Police decided the best way to effect a possible return was to send Muzabazi to Zimbabwe, even raising the money to help make that happen.

Muzabazi's mother, who lives in the southern African country, helped obtain needed documentation and Zimbabwean authorities accepted the children belonged with their mother in Canada.

However, the paternal family wasn't ready to turn them over.

At one point, as Muzabazi waited outside the boarding school, a family member took the kids and fled.

Running out of money, the distraught mother said she was on the verge of giving up and returning to Canada without her children.

Then, the Canadian embassy in Harare called her last week to say the children had been dropped off there.

"I just started crying. I couldn't believe it," she said.

As the wide-eyed young ones clutched their mother and watched the throng of news people, Muzabazi said her daughter still appears fretful about any separation.

"She just can't go far away from me," Muzabazi said. "She just wants to be with me all the time."

A criminal investigation was ongoing, police said.

Background

Kids kept a world away

The saga began in April, when Rene, 7, and Shane, 4, went for a visit to Muzabazi's native Zimbabwe, something that had occurred several times before without incident.

This time, however, the divorced mother began to worry when the children, who were born in Mississauga, Ont., were not returned to Canada as scheduled.

Instead, paternal family members placed the kids in a Zimbabwean boarding school, which actively hid them from local authorities, police allege.

In September, the worried mother approached Toronto police, who began investigating. They in turn contacted government officials, the RCMP and Interpol.

Police bias let Pickton keep killing: Inquiry

Bias against the poor, aboriginal, drug-addicted sex workers in Vancouver's troubled Downtown Eastside led to a series of failures that allowed serial killer Robert Pickton to hunt unimpeded by police for years, a public inquiry has found.

Commissioner Wally Oppal's 1,448-page report, released Monday, chronicles years of mistakes that allowed Pickton to lure dozens of women to his farm in Port Coquitlam, B.C., with little interference from police and even less concern from the public.

"Put yourself in the shoes of one of the missing and murdered women and think how it would feel if you were ... considered unworthy of attention," said Oppal in a news conference.

When relatives and friends attempted to report those women missing, officers and staff with the Vancouver police department told them the women were transient drug addicts who weren't in any trouble or were simply on vacation, Oppal's report notes, referring back to testimony

RCMP delayed interviewing Robert Pickton, above, because he was "busy" on the farm, a report says. THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE from those families at the inquiry.

Still, Oppal concludes the effects of that bias were "unintentional," leading to systemic failures rather than a conscious decision to ignore Vancouver's missing women.

Among other mistakes, Oppal criticized authorities for being reluctant to accept the possibility of a serial killer, handing the investigation to untrained officers, halting work for months at a time and assuming the disappearances stopped before they did.

He made 63 recommendations, including a regional police force for the greater Vancouver region and policy changes to ensure they reflect the needs of impoverished women.

Oppal also called for more services for sex workers and other vulnerable women, including immediate funding for a 24-hour drop-in centre in the Downtown Eastside for sex workers and a transportation service for women and girls who would otherwise resort to hitchhiking along the so-called Highway of Tears in the province's north.

But it's not clear whether Oppal's report will satisfy his many critics, including relatives of missing and murdered women and numerous advocacy groups, who have denounced the inquiry as a flawed process that ignored the voices of the women it was created to protect and put too much emphasis on the police. Most boring cottage party ever? Carney vacationed with Liberal finance critic while he was being courted for leadership race

The Bank of Canada tried to quell questions about its governor's impartiality and judgment Monday, saying Mark Carney was not afoot of conflict rules by vacationing in the summer at the cottage of the Liberal finance critic.

The central bank confirmed a weekend report that Carney stayed at Scott Brison's Nova Scotia cottage while key members of the Liberal party were courting him for the leadership. Spokesman Jeremy Harrison said there was nothing improper in the visit, and that bank duties were not discussed.

"The Bank of Canada's general counsel, who is responsible for enforcing the bank's conflict-of-interest policy, has assessed that this visit does not breach the bank's conflict of interest guidelines in any way," Harrison said. "Neither the Bank of Canada nor governor Carney have an actual or potential commercial or business relationship with Mr. Brison."

Harrison added that Carney and Brison had been friends for about a decade.

RIM. Rogers begins orders for 'all-touch' BB10 devices

Rogers Communications says that its current wireless customers are now able to place orders for BlackBerry 10 smartphones.

The new BlackBerry 10 devices on offer will be "all-touch" and won't have the physical keyboard that BlackBerry users are used to typing on.

But Rogers won't be providing details on pricing, availability or specifications until early in the new year.

Research In Motion has previously said an "all-touch" version of its new phones would be released first, followed by a model with a physical keyboard shortly afterward.

RIM announced separately that it's giving an invitation-only preview of the BlackBerry 10 to more than 120 select government and private-sector customers in a variety of industries. The two announcements are part of efforts to build interest in a new generation of BlackBerrys in hopes of reviving the Canadian technology company.

The BlackBerry 10 smartphones are seen as make-or-break products for Research In Motion, which has faced intense competition from Apple's iPhones and smartphones using the Google Android operating system.

RIM shares closed down 22 cents, or 1.59 per cent, to $13.66 Monday on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

IT'S ACTUALLY NOT THE END OF THE WORLD

SHE SAYS...
Jessica Napier
metronews.ca

Do you have all of your affairs in order? Have you told all of your friends and family just how much you love them? Because if the fear-mongers are to be believed, we only have a few days left to say our goodbyes before an apocalyptic end-of-days descends upon us all on Dec. 21.

A fate foretold by hieroglyphs and perpetuated by a terrible John Cusack disaster movie, the Mayan doomsday prophecy represents the end of the Mesoamerican Long Count calendar. This so-called Day of Reckoning will bring about something (although no one is quite sure what exactly) that will mean the end of the world as we know it.

Prepping for reality

And yet, despite all the evidence to the contrary (you know, science), people around the world are very into this faux-pocalypse.

But before you get too nervous about solar flares, catastrophic floods and swarms of killer bees, just stop. NASA went and debunked the whole thing by releasing a video entitled Why the World Didn't End Yesterday, a whole 10 days ahead of schedule. Their official statement is something along the lines of: "Our planet has been getting along just fine for more than four billion years so everybody just relax, OK."

And yet, despite all the evidence to the contrary (you know, science), people around the world are very into this faux-pocalypse. Alarmist bloggers are convincing people to hunker down with canned goods while New Age visionaries are purchasing one-way plane tickets to a remote village in Turkey renowned for its protective energies. And then there's that Chinese farmer who is spending hundreds of thousands of dollars building an ark as a precautionary measure — AN ARK!

I'm tempted to join in on the fun: host a doomsday pity party for myself and listen to Britney Spears' Till the World Ends on repeat while drowning my sorrows in a pint of Häagen-Dazs Mayan Chocolate ice cream. But rationally, we all know that we've got nothing to worry about, we're still buying Christmas presents and making plans for New Year's Eve. I'm actually inclined to think that the whole thing might just be a way for companies to cash in on tasteless apocalypse-blowout-sales and end-of-the-world-themed merchandise.

So even though I love a good conspiracy theory, I think I'll side with our modern-day scientists over an ancient civilization and their 5,125-year-old calendar. However, if your Judgement Day predictions involve a sexy astronaut version of Ben Affleck saving us all from a rogue asteroid, you definitely have my attention.

World's largest pizza gets served

Five Italian chefs have set a new record for the world's largest pizza, which is a staggering 40 metres in diameter — the length of nearly three buses.

Such was the size of the massive margherita that the chefs in Rome had to bake the dough in 5,234 separate batches over a 48-hour period.

The gargantuan food item is made gluten-free in order to raise awareness about celiac disease, the most frequent food intolerance worldwide.

CELEBRITY BUCKET LISTS

Chris Colfer (Glee)

You know, I've always had a really, really detailed bucket list, and I'd say I'm only about one 90th of the way there, so I really hope the Mayans aren't right because I have a lot of stuff I want to do, and I'm going to be really, really pissed if it all ends and I'm not able to. If I had a month left, I'd probably just go on a very expensive vacation.

Joel McHale (Community)

An end of the world bucket list? Yes. A really sturdy bucket.

Maggie Grace (Taken 2)

Honestly, one of my sort of bucket list items I just ticked off. I did a Broadway play for the first time. It was terrifying. But it's something I've wanted to do since I was 11 years old. So I at least checked one off.

Jake Abel (The Host)

If I knew the world was going to end, I would skydive, which is something that normal people do, but it would take the end of the earth for me. But without a parachute. I would just jump out of an airplane.

Teresa Palmer (Warm Bodies)

Oh gosh, end of the world bucket list? Yeah, I would've liked to have had a baby before the end of the world, but there's not really time for that. I'm not sure what I'm going to do. I want to jump out of a plane, for sure. I would just eat so much food, 24/7 just eat and eat and eat. Travel around the world, eating from all different cultures. That'd be amazing.

Kellan Lutz (The Twilight Saga)

No, I don't (have one), because I don't believe the world's going to come to an end. God never gave a date so I don't believe it's going to happen. So there's no need for me to make a plan B with all that. I'm just living my life every day to the fullest.

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

The big ol' babies of 2012

Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

The past few days have been rough for everyone, so I'm going to dedicate today's column to some of the biggest celebrity babies who made their appearance this year. That's right: lots and lots of adorable babies!

Who: Blue Ivy Carter
Parents: Jay-Z and Beyoncé
Given the media attention surrounding the birth of Blue Ivy, it's pretty surprising the world didn't tip off its axis when she came into the world on Jan. 7.

Who: Samuel Affleck
Parents: Jennifer Garner and Ben Affleck
The movie-star duo welcomed their first son on Feb. 27. Not much is known about baby Sam, other than he'll probably be ridiculously good looking and talented.

Who: Maxwell Johnson
Parents: Jessica Simpson and Eric Johnson
After following the longest pregnancy known to man, Simpson finally birthed baby Maxi on May 1. And now she's allegedly pregnant again. That, or maybe she's just constantly gestating.

Who: Jack Pratt
Parents: Anna Farris and Chris Pratt
Not a lot of fanfare was made about baby Jack's somewhat premature appearance on Aug. 25. Instead of gracing any magazine covers to showboat the news, new dad Chris Pratt Tweeted this message to his followers, "It's a boy! Thanks for all your kind words. In lieu of gifts we ask that you mouth kiss a stranger."

Who: Edward Duke Rancic
Parents: Bill and Giuliana Rancic
After years of unsuccessful IVF treatments and a miscarriage and then a breast cancer diagnosis, the Rancic family finally had a bit of good news: Their baby Edward Duke was born via a gestational carrier on Aug. 29.

Who: Tennessee Toth
Parents: Reese Witherspoon and Jim Toth
The baby, whose name still sounds like a brand of whiskey to me, was born on Sept. 27.

Newtown tragedy: Freeman didn't comment

Not so fast, Facebook users. A lengthy quote attributed to Morgan Freeman in the wake of the Newtown, Conn., elementary school shooting tragedy has been making the rounds on the social networking site, suggesting media coverage encouraged the shooter. The only problem is those aren't Freeman's words. "Morgan neither made statements or posted those statements. We are trying to find out who did, but they did not originate from him," a source for the actor tells E! News.

Jason Trawick and Britney Spears

Oops! I did it again? Break up talk circulates for Britney and beau

Britney Spears' relationship with Jason Trawick may be about to end, though the X Factor host and pop star is apparently the last to know, according to Hollyscoop.

"Jason has told Britney's entire family that he's planning to leave her so Britney will have a support system when he breaks the bad news," a source says of the couple, who are reportedly spending the holidays apart. Trawick is said to be waiting until Spears' work on the current season of the X Factor is wrapped before dumping her.

Matt Damon sets it straight

Matt Damon has been dodging gay rumours ever since he and best friend Ben Affleck burst on the scene with Good Will Hunting, but he's avoided acknowledging them — until now. "I never denied those rumours because I was offended and didn't want to offend my friends who were gay — as if being gay were some kind of f—ing disease," he tells Playboy magazine. "It put me in a weird position in that sense. The whole thing was just gross."

Fitness. Celebrity trainer Ashley Borden has a Christmas gift for you: expert tips to avoid temptation

ROMINA
MCGUINNESS
life@metronews.ca

What was the point of kicking yourself into shape last January if you're going to let all your efforts go to waste in the last two weeks of the year?

"You should absolutely indulge during the holidays because if you restrict yourself, you'll only feel deprived and frustrated," Ashley Borden, who trains celebrities including Ryan Gosling, Christina Aguilera and Ke$ha, tells Metro. "The problem is that people tend to adopt an 'all or nothing' attitude and as a result, their fitness and diet completely goes out of the window."

Here's what she'd do in certain situations.

Scenario 1: There is no way I can ditch my family so I can go off and do some exercise.

"I don't believe that because you're with your family, you can't take the time out to workout," says Borden.

"Why would you turn off your life and drop the things that are actually helping you feel good? Many people find dealing with the full family dynamic both stressful and emotional — making it even more important that you set aside an hour or so each day of 'me' time where you can let off some steam.

"It may seem a little selfish, but don't care."

TIP: Focusing on yourself will make you a more productive family member because you'll feel less resentful for being locked in the house stuffing the turkey and chopping up carrots.

Scenario 2: The holidays are about switching off. I don't want to stick to a schedule.

"Normally, people find it easy to stay on track because they follow a set routine. They get up, cycle to work, have breakfast and so on," says Borden. "But during the holidays, because there isn't the same schedule and structure, diet and fitness habits can become very erratic. The assumption is that once it's all over, losing the extra weight and bloat will be easy when deep down we all know we're going to struggle. The key is to not schedule in exercise. Make loose but firm plans — book a spinning class or stock up on fruit and vegetables so you have something to snack on."

TIP: Wake up without an alarm. Have some breakfast before you do a quick 30 minute cardio workout. Once you've done that, you can relax for the rest of the day.

Scenario 3: Festive food is my favourite. I'm going to starve myself all day just so I can stuff my face at dinnertime.

"Never assume that it's OK to skip meals during the day in order to lash out at Christmas dinner. This kind of behaviour will really screw up your eating patterns," warns Borden.

"Your body can't assimilate and metabolize all these calories at once and that's how you end up gaining weight. It's much easier to eat a normal dinner and allow yourself a bit of indulgence. One slice of cake won't make or break your body."

TIP: On days when you know you're likely to over-eat, try and break a sweat for at least 20 minutes.

Scenario 4: It's impossible to workout in my hotel.

"If you're really stuck at your in-laws in the middle of nowhere, you always have your body weight to use.

Set up a mini circuit in your room — even if you have very little space, you can train for around 30 minutes by doing reverse lunges, planks or pushups.

If you want to do some cardio, pack a jump rope."

TIP: Invest in some resistance bands with handles. And, again, pack a jump rope in your luggage.

Don't get sucked into the Santarexic habits this month. THINKSTOCK

Your holiday cheat sheet

NUTRI-BITES
Theresa Albert, DHN, RNCP
myfriendinfood.com

Oh, come on, it's the holidays! We both know you are going to eat more than you should, so let's just embrace it. I encourage my private clients to switch to a "nutrient per calorie" model when they are going to cheat. That means that if you can't keep calories low, focus on those items that are loaded with nutrients and use them to enhance your "cheats." Here are three ideas:

1. Cranberry sauce

Assuming it is homemade and not from a can (which likely means more sugar), this condiment is a great way to stretch that brownie/Nanaimo bar/cake you have on your plate. A couple of tablespoons on the side will give you a filling, tart kick of phytonutrients and fibre. The hope is that you can now resist that second slice...

2. Spice it up

Your brain registers intense flavours more actively than bland ones. This means that adding spiciness or low calorie intensity may help you feel satisfied with less food. Think hot sauce, spicy mustard or even horseradish — all will perk up your palate!

3. Fresh herbs

Oh, I know they are often only on the platter for garnish but who says you can't hog garnish? Fresh herbs are full of chlorophyll and tummy soothing nutrients that may replace the extra space on your plate that you are tempted to fill with mashed potatoes.

Easy treat. Chocolate Espresso Bread Pudding

1. Butter a 13 x 9-inch (3 l) glass baking dish and set aside.

2. In saucepan, combine chocolate, 2 cups (500 ml) of cream, sugar, espresso and butter and melt over medium-low heat, stirring, until everything is smooth. Remove from heat.

3. Meanwhile, place slices of bread on cutting board and cut off crusts. Cut each slice diagonally into 4 triangles. Set aside.

4. In bowl, whisk eggs until blended. Gradually pour in chocolate mix in a thin stream, whisking to combine. Spoon a 1/2 inch (1 cm) layer of chocolate mix over bottom of prepared dish. Place half bread triangles over chocolate, overlapping slightly. Pour half of remaining chocolate mix over bread; cover with remaining bread in same pattern as before. Pour remaining chocolate mix over top. Press bread down with fork to allow mix to coat bread. Allow dish to cool 10 mins, then cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate 24 hours.

5. To serve, preheat oven to 350 F (180 C). Remove plastic wrap from dish and bake 45 mins. or until top is crunchy and pudding is set but pudding-like in the centre. Let cool for at least 10 minutes.

6. In a chilled bowl, whip remaining cream and serve with warm pudding. DAIRYGOODNESS.CA

Ingredients

- 6 oz (170 g) dark chocolate (70% cocoa solids), chopped

The goodness of eggnog in a tart? It doesn't get any better

Crust

1. In a food processor, pulse together flour, icing sugar and salt. Pulse in butter until the mixture has the texture of fine crumbs.

Ingredients

Crust

- 1 1/2 cups (375 ml) all-purpose flour
- 3 tbsp (45 ml) icing sugar
- 1/2 tsp (2 ml) salt
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) unsalted cold butter, cubed
- 1 egg yolk
- 2 tbsp (25 ml) whipping cream

Eggnog Filling

- 1 pkg (250g/8 oz) plain cream cheese, softened
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) whipping cream
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) granulated sugar
- 3 eggs
- 2 egg yolks
- 1 tsp (5 ml) pure vanilla extract
- 1/2 tsp (2 ml) ground nutmeg
- Pinch salt
- 2 tbsp (25 ml) bourbon (optional)
- 1 tsp (5 ml) ground cinnamon (optional)

This recipe makes one 10-inch (25 cm) tart, 8 servings EGG FARMERS OF ONTARIO

2. Whisk egg yolk with whipping cream; drizzle over flour mixture. Pulse dough to combine. Loosely divide dough into quarters, clump together and pat each quarter into tart pan. Press pastry evenly over bottom and up sides of a 10-inch (25 cm) tart pan with removable bottom. Refrigerate for at least 30 minutes or up to 1 day.

3. Cover dough with foil; fill with dried beans or rice to weigh down the crust. Bake in bottom third of oven at 375 F (190 C) until edges are a light golden colour, about 20 minutes. Remove weights and foil and let cool on rack for 15 minutes.

Eggnog filling

1. In a food processor, blend cream cheese, whipping cream, and sugar until creamy, about 1 minute.

2. Add whole eggs, egg yolks, vanilla, nutmeg, salt, bourbon and cinnamon (if desired), and blend until smooth. Gently pour mixture into tart shell.

3. Bake in 350 F (180 C) oven until filling is set, but still jiggling slightly in the centre, about 20 minutes (the filling will continue to set as it cools). Cool tart completely in pan on a rack.

4. Just before serving, remove side of pan. Cut into eight wedges and serve with whipped cream. Whip 2 cups (500 ml) whipping cream and fold in 1 tsp (5 ml) of nutmeg, if desired.

Talk with kids about shooting, make them feel safe: Experts

Family. Following the Connecticut shooting, it's best to limit kids' exposure to media

The killings at a Connecticut elementary school left parents struggling to figure out what, if anything, to tell their children.

President Barack Obama said he and his wife, Michelle, would tell their daughters that they love them and hug them a little tighter. Experts say that's a good example to follow. Parents also should allow children to talk about their feelings in the coming days while sheltering them from the 24/7 media coverage of the event, they say.

A man gunned down more than two dozen people Friday, most of them kids at a Newtown, Conn., elementary school. The shooter was among the 28 people left dead, apparently from a self-inflicted wound.

Whitney Finucane wasn't sure how and when she would talk with her son, Nico, about the shooting. She kissed and hugged him when he came out from kindergarten at Dr. Martin Luther King Elementary in Providence, R.I., on Friday.

"I don't know how to explain insanity and evil to a five-year-old," she said. "I don't know that he can really grasp it."

Even the youngest schoolchildren are likely to hear about it, said Glenn Saxe, chairman of the department of child and adolescent psychiatry at NYU Langone Medical Center.

"It's really important, especially at this time, for parents to check in with their kids, to be attuned to how they're feeling, how they're doing and to answer questions honestly and straightforwardly," he said. "For any other kid in school, this has meaning. Parents need to understand that even in surprising ways, this can affect their kids."

Parents can start by asking their children what they've already heard and what questions they have, said Dr. David Schonfeld, a pediatrician and director of the National Center for School Crisis and Bereavement at Cincinnati Children's Hospital Medical Center. If they ask why someone would do something like this, it's OK to say you don't know.

"I wouldn't provide false reassurance or dismiss legitimate concerns," he said. "We

Safety at school

As students head back to their classrooms on Monday, parents and children should know that school shootings are rare and schools still are among the safest places, said William Lassiter of the Center for the Prevention of School Violence. Parents can ask their principal or parent-teacher group for a copy of their school crisis plan.

Notice whether schools stick to their own security plans, he said. Do people have to check in at the door and sign in at the front office, for example?

"A lot of times, the parents are the ones who need to remind the school," he said.

don't help children by telling them they shouldn't be afraid of things that are frightening."

Parents can tell their kids, "What is most important is that you're safe and you're going to be safe," said Dr. Louis Kraus, chief of child and adolescent psychiatry at Rush University Medical Center in Chicago.

Above all, parents need to try to help their children feel safe, he said. Helping kids return to or maintain normal routines can help minimize their anxiety, Kraus said.

Some children may ask the same questions over and over as a way to seek reassurance, and parents shouldn't dismiss them, said Dr. David Fassler, a child and adolescent psychiatrist in Burlington, Vt.

"Acknowledge and validate the child's thoughts, feelings, and reactions. Let them know that you think their questions and concerns are important and appropriate," he said.

Parents of young children should keep their children from hearing reports on TV, radio and social media and to closely monitor exposure to media for all children, several experts said. Children who show persistent signs of anxiety and stress, including recurring nightmares or sleep problems and fears about leaving home, should see their pediatrician or a mental health expert, Kraus said.

Time for a healthy nature break

CELIA MILNE

Need a little pick-me-up?

Get up, get out, and head toward the trees.

Nature can have a restorative effect on our health — even in the winter, says Maxine Crawford, a PhD student in psychology at the University of British Columbia.

"Studies show exposure to nature can increase recovery from illness, improve longevity and improve health. As well, exposure to real or virtual nature reduces stress."

Crawford recommends Canadians take nature breaks to recharge batteries during the holidays.

"Bundling up and getting outside to a fairly quiet place surrounded by plants and trees is the best option," she says.

A U.K. study shows exercising outdoors is associated with greater feelings of energy and satisfaction, along with a reduction in tension, confusion, anger and depression.

Other studies have found exposure to nature can lower blood pressure and reduce heart rate. The Japanese have long believed that "forest bathing" has health benefits.

Even looking out at nature can be helpful.

"If the weather is too extreme, sitting by a window that looks out on to a natural setting is the next best thing," says Crawford.

A recent study in Norway found that people who were recovering from illnesses had improved health if they had a view of nature, compared with having a blocked view.

You can always bring nature in. Research indicates that people who have plants in their office are generally less stressed.

And plants improve air quality.

The bottom line? Get back in tune with nature.

"Taking the time to move away from televisions and computer screens and spend just five minutes looking outside at the birds in the trees can have an impact on your overall well-being," says Crawford.

Gift buying for awkward people

FUN AND FRUGAL
Lesley Scorgie
money@metronews.ca

So your dad has a new girlfriend and you're still warming up to her. Sure, she seems nice enough, but without knowing much about her personal tastes, what should you buy her for the holidays when your budget is already tight?

We've all been faced with the "what to buy for the awkward person in your life" dilemma. You don't want to waste your money or offend your boss, co-worker, a not-too-close friend, or someone your friend or family member is dating. You may even want to impress the person with something useful or miraculously thoughtful.

Before you hit up the mall for the latest infomercial gadget, understand the relationship of the person to you and what they mean to you today and in the future. If you and your brother-in-law are off to a rocky start, you may want to extend a thoughtful olive branch that could help mend a bridge or two. If it's your boss, watch what you spend so that you don't come off looking like a suck-up, especially if your coworkers find out.

Determine the appropriate price point for the person. Have an open discussion with friends and family members in advance and set limits. This might be an opportune time to introduce the idea of a frugal Secret Santa gift exchange where you're only responsible for buying one gift for one person.

Be resourceful. Investigate what the person would want or need. Listen carefully when in conversation to see if they give away any hints. Ask someone who knows them well what they'd enjoy. Are they a coffee connoisseur or movie buff? If so, perhaps a travel mug, which reduces waste and saves a few pennies at the till, or a gift card to the movies, would be appropriate.

Cash in your loyalty rewards toward the gift so you don't have to dig deeper into your wallet. Better yet, forget buying a gift and make a donation on behalf of your coworkers to a well-known charity.

Overall, stop while you're ahead. You don't need to buy gifts for everyone in your life. This results in overspending or spreading out your budget so thin that you'll end up buying junk for people rather than something useful or thoughtful. If you've got loads of people you'd like to please with presents, try baking or making something small and thoughtful.

A frugal gift of appreciation for that awkward person might go a long way toward making the relationship more pleasant.

But if you really don't like the person, forget a gift and simply save your money.

Games to raise your money IQ

YOUR MONEY
Alison Griffiths
money@metronews.ca

It's not too late to raise your holiday money IQ! If you're feeling a little overwhelmed as the big day draws near, there's nothing like a game to improve your outlook.

The Investor Education Fund (getsmarteraboutmoney.ca) has created Cranial Cash Clash, a series of interactive games to teach money skills. The latest, Gift Thrift, offers tips about holiday spending, the use of credit cards and related topics such as credit ratings. You may find that a couple of the questions have fairly obvious answers, but they do get you thinking.

On the other hand, there are many you likely don't know.

Try this one: If you decide to give a gift to your favourite charity or charities, does the amount you give affect the tax credit you receive?

Which is right?

A. No. As long as they are accredited charities, the benefit to you is the same.
B. Yes, but there may be restrictions for out-of-province charities.

C. Yes, the tax credit goes up if you give more than $200.

D. No, it's a 15 per cent credit no matter how much you give.

The answer is C.

Gift Thrift can be played via Facebook with friends or family members. The Leaderboard lets you log in and keep track of scores as you go. There are eight other Cranial Cash Clash games dealing with everything from investing to financial scams and debt. The questions are randomized so you can't practice the answers for a certain win.

Bonus points are awarded when you answer within a certain time. If you flub, as I did on a question about credit scores (my finger slipped, really!), you can input your email address at the end of the game to receive information about that subject area. You'll also see a link to a more detailed explanation.

Though not designed for youth, the series is also a great way to get teens and young adults thinking and talking about money issues. They won't be familiar with many of the topics, but the questions will stimulate discussion.

Fans of Russian team call for all-white, non-gay team

Fans of two-time defending Russian champion Zenit St. Petersburg are calling for non-white and gay players to be excluded from the team.

Supporters' club Landscrona released a manifesto Monday demanding Zenit to field an all-white, heterosexual team. It added "dark-skinned players are all but forced down Zenit's throat" and said gay players were "unworthy of our great city."

Coach Luciano Spalletti said on Zenit's website that "tolerance for me is most of all the ability to understand and accept differences."

"Furthermore, being tolerant means that you fight against any kind of stupidity," he added.

Stamkos staying active while away from NHL ice

Lockout. Top sniper trying to 'pick up positives' while awaiting end to labour unrest

The longest hiatus Steven Stamkos has ever taken from high-level hockey is not without its occasional good moments.

There are always plenty of laughs when the NHL star takes the ice for a weekly pickup game with his father Chris and some buddies, a handful of whom are almost three times his age. There is the extra time spent in the gym alongside close friend and mentor Gary Roberts.

And then there is the anticipation of next week's Christmas celebration, the first one he'll get to enjoy at home with family in Markham, Ont., in six or seven years.

"As tough as it is, as frustrating as it is, you try to pick up some positives," said Stamkos.

Quoted

"We feel bad for (the fans), but we're obviously trying to get something done."

But it's clear the NHL's most dangerous scorer is feeling the pain of the lockout. Standing under the sloped roof at the building formerly known as Maple Leaf Gardens on Monday, the locked-out Tampa Bay Lightning forward couldn't help but slip in a few references to his growing displeasure.

"It's frustrating," said Stamkos. "You do something for your whole life and you don't really think anything of it. Everything you do is geared towards playing hockey. Now when you don't have that, it's tough."

The 22-year-old quickly steered the conversation back to a charity game in Toronto on Wednesday night, where he'll captain a team against one led by Montreal Canadiens defenceman P.K. Subban.

He'll get to skate alongside James Neal, Dion Phaneuf, Phil Kessel and Logan Couture, among others, with all of the proceeds from the sold-out Mattamy Athletic Centre benefiting the NHLPA's Goals & Dreams Fund and the RBC Play Hockey program.

"When there's no hockey, you try to find other things to do and a great cause to be part of," said Stamkos. "This is one of them."

State of the lockout

- Games cancelled. Players have missed six pay cheques with 526 games cancelled through Dec. 30.

- State of talks. Neither side is meeting. The NHL and NHLPA met with federal mediators in New York Dec. 12-13, but then talks ended.

- Happening now. All 750 players are deciding whether to give their 30-member executive board the mandate to file what is known as a "disclaimer of interest." A two-thirds majority is needed to take the next step — dissolving their union. The five-day informal electronic vote is being conducted until Thursday.

- Will it pass? Think "solidarity" here. There's no way players won't get behind this move. Not giving their board this power basically ends the game with Gary Bettman smiling like the Cheshire Cat from Alice in Wonderland.

Austin gets another CFL chance with Ticats

Kent Austin was named the Tiger-Cats' head coach, general manager and vice-president of football operations in Hamilton on Monday.

FRANK GUNN/THE CANADIAN PRESS

When Kent Austin turned the Hamilton Tiger-Cats down in 2011, he had no idea he'd be running the team a year later.

The Ticats and the Saskatchewan Roughriders both pursued Austin to fill their head-coaching vacancies in 2011, but he opted to stay in his job as head coach at Cornell University.

This time, the Ticats sweetened the pot.

On Monday, the club hired Austin as their head coach, general manager and vice-president of football operations.

"Last year, the timing wasn't

"But things change and for me this opportunity continued to grow and continued to grow in our thoughts. I just thought it was the best time and my family really wanted to come."

In his new roles, Austin is in charge of all football-related decisions, something he says was more attractive to him. Still, he was surprised the Ticats gave him a second chance.

"Sometimes opportunities come around once in this profession and if you pass them up you don't see them again," he said. "But for whatever reason it did and came at a time that was right for us."

Soccer. Canada won't rush hiring of men's coach

Canada will name an interim men's coach to handle January soccer friendlies with Denmark and the U.S., according to the president of the Canadian Soccer Association.

The games are the first for Canada since it crashed out of World Cup qualifying in an 8-1 defeat in Honduras in October. Stephen Hart, despite support from his players, resigned days later as coach.

The search for his replacement is ongoing.

Long-time women's coach moves on

The coach who brought respectability to Canadian women's basketball is stepping down.

Allison McNeill capped her 11th year as head coach with an inspiring run to the quarter-finals at the London Olympics, but she said she realized in the days following the Games that there were other things in her life that needed attention.

"Right now, this isn't the most important thing to me, and it always has been," she said Monday from her home in Surrey, B.C., as she talked of her sick father and brother-in-law.

She said she first thought of continuing through the Pan American Games in Toronto and the Rio Olympics, but decided she couldn't restore basketball to the place it once held in her life.

She leaves the program as the longest-serving national team women's head coach and is second only to men's coach Jack Donohue's 17 seasons. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Beyond baseball

Dickey, an English literature major, released an autobiography in 2012 titled Wherever I Wind Up: My Quest for Truth, Authenticity and the Perfect Knuckleball.

- In it, Dickey details the sexual abuse he endured as a child, how his dreams of being a pitcher were nearly destroyed and how he was sustained by his Christian faith while confronting his demons.

- He's also set to publish a children's adaptation of Wherever I Wind Up in fall 2013.

After inking a contract extension and passing his physical, R.A. Dickey joined the Blue Jays through a seven-player trade with the New York Mets.

There are a lot of reasons to be skeptical of Dickey. It's the easy perspective to take, so here it is.

He is 38 years old. He has no ulnar collateral ligament in his pitching arm. He throws the most fickle and unpredictable type of pitch: The knuckleball. And before he joined the Mets in 2010, he pitched to truly awful results. In his only major-league appearance in 2006, he surrendered six home runs to the Tigers without escaping the fourth inning.

But now Toronto might be called the favourite to win the World Series. That's because there are also reasons to trust Dickey. So, here's the other perspective.

His age does not reflect where he is in his career. Historically, knuckleball pitchers stay effective much longer than their velocity-obsessed cohorts. Fellow knuckleballer Tim Lincecum had one of his finest seasons at age 41. More importantly, Dickey has actually improved as he's entered his late-30s — culminating in 2012's Cy Young award.

Simply put, Dickey seems to be at his peak. Even if he regresses, he could still be an elite pitcher. An ace, bewildering hitters from the Rogers Centre mound for the next three years.

Dickey didn't always throw the knuckleball, so it's nearly useless to analyze his career prior to his mastery of the pitch back in 2010. Since then, he has continued to make significant adjustments. In 2012, he relied more on a hard knuckleball. A pitch zig-zagging towards the plate at upwards of 80 m.p.h. Throwing that fast is rare for a knuckleballer. It allowed him greater control — minimizing walks and leading the National League in strikeouts.

Born without the UCL — a ligament on the inner side of the elbow — Dickey shouldn't be able to turn a doorknob without feeling pain. But he can. And he can also throw the filthiest pitch in baseball. Save your Stephen Strasburg changeup, Justin Verlander fastball and Roy Halladay curveball. Dickey's knuckleball makes hitters look silly.

As a baseball player, Dickey is something new. He's something special. He writes books. He climbed Mount Kilimanjaro to help raise awareness of human trafficking in India. He gives away scores of tickets to underprivileged children.

Imagine a player with the dominance of a Halladay and the folk-hero following of John McDermott.

The deal. Anthopoulos lands true ace

Blue Jays general manager Alex Anthopoulos paid a steep price to land knuckleballer R.A. Dickey, but he says it was the deal he needed to make for Toronto to be contenders for longer than just next season.

Anthopoulos made another splashy move, acquiring the 38-year-old reigning NL Cy Young winner in a bid to improve the Jays' starting rotation.

"We're just so close to contention," Anthopoulos said on a conference call Monday night.

Quoted

"Looking forward to a new chapter with the Jays."

R.A. Dickey on Twitter after officially being acquired by the Blue Jays on Monday.

"It's not just about one season, this allows us to put what we feel is a contending team together for an extended run, for a three to five year period."

The Jays gave up prized young catcher Travis d'Arnaud to the New York Mets as part of a package.

Toronto then signed Dickey to a two-year contract extension for $29 million US, with a $12-million option for the 2016 season.

The Blue Jays also acquired catcher Josh Thole and minor-league catcher Mike Nickeas, while the Mets received catcher John Buck, minor-league right-hander Noah Syndergaard and minor-league outfielder Wilmer Becerra.

You could easily allow yourself to believe that you can do or say anything without repercussion, which is a dangerous attitude to take. Think before you act today. It could save you a lot of trouble.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

You may think that by supporting certain causes you are doing good in the world but are you truly committed on a personal level? One cause above all others is precious to you — give it your undivided attention. SALLY BROMPTON
